

THE TANKARD

Newspaper of the 128th Air Refueling Wing— Milwaukee, WI

Readers of the electronic Tankard,

The objective of this publication is connect unit members, their families, retirees, and local supporters to the ongoings of the 128th Air Refueling Wing. All of the information in this publication is non-classified and releaseable to the public.

Communicating this open and up-to-date information will give readers an insight to the mission and value of the 128 ARW.

Sections of newsletter include Messages from the Top, a public affairs feature story, Portrait of an Airman, Pieces of History, In the News, and Announcements and stand-alone feature photos. Each component in the newsletter will contain links to the base website or original site of information.

All text that appears in bright red has a hyperlink to the webpage where the imagery or content is posted. The links are necessary for dissemination of written information.

Because the Air Force mandates that base publications are not to be printed, the publication will be released in a .pdf that is formatted to fit on a computer screen for better reading. Print options will be available, but the purpose and the primary form of dissemination and readership will be electronic.

To view this publication, go to the 128 ARW public website and under the subtitle Tankard is the first edition of the electronic Tankard. Once you click on the link to view it, you also have the option of saving a copy the publication.

The public affairs shop is dedicated to sharing the 128 ARW story with its members and the public. If you know of any events, training, or real-world missions that include or affect the 128 ARW, send an email with pertinent information for PA to look into covering. If you are or know an Airman who is outstanding and participates in interesting activities on or off base, feel free to make a recommendation for the Portrait of an Airman section of the publication.

Please contact the public affairs shop with any suggestions or feedback regarding this publication.

Regards,
Public Affairs Staff
